The official Acuity Insights Casper page describes Casper as an open-response situational judgment test. It says the test takes approximately 65–85 minutes, including two optional breaks, and has 11 scenarios: four with video responses (two open-ended questions each, one minute per response) and seven with typed responses (two questions on the same page, 3.5 minutes total for both). It says Casper is scored by certified human raters, not AI, that scores go directly to the programs you select for distribution, and that each program decides how and when to use Casper scores. Test format may vary slightly for select programs. This site does not predict a Casper score or estimate admission chances. https://acuityinsights.app/casper/ (checked 2026-11-27)
The official Casper page says that after you reserve a Casper test, you can access an official practice test in your Acuity Insights account, and that this official practice test is the best way to prepare. It says Acuity Insights is not affiliated with any third-party Casper preparation tools or courses and does not endorse them. Available dates, fees and distribution deadlines can be browsed on the official Dates & Fees tool (the public dates-and-fees address redirected, on 27 November 2026, to https://my.acuityinsights.app/dates-times), or by selecting programs in an Acuity Insights account. Results are valid only for the admissions cycle you select. For Canadian programs, you must take Casper in the language the program requires; some programs accept only English or only French, and some accept either. Accommodations are available with a request submitted at least four weeks before the scheduled test date. Fee assistance described on the page is tied to approved U.S. or UK fee-assistance programs. Confirm every date, fee and required test type on the official tool and on the program’s own admissions page. https://acuityinsights.app/casper/ (checked 2026-11-27)
