UHIP's coverage-details page says if eligible dependants will be living with the student or employee in Ontario, UHIP coverage must be bought for them. Only dependants with an exemption can opt out. Eligible dependants include a legal or common-law spouse living with the member (the common-law relationship must have existed for at least 12 months), and an unmarried dependent child under 22, or under 25 if studying full-time at an accredited institution, or any age if mentally or physically disabled as UHIP defines it. UHIP says siblings and parents are not eligible dependants. https://uhip.ca/uhip-services/coverage-details/ (checked 2026-11-27)

UHIP says dependants are not enrolled automatically. The coverage-details page lists these steps: download an application form, take the completed form in person to the UHIP office at the university, bring documentation (passport) showing the family's arrival in Canada, and pay for coverage when enrolling them. Family coverage, UHIP says, begins the date they arrive in Canada, but no earlier than the 10th day of the month before the student's studies or employment begin. https://uhip.ca/uhip-services/coverage-details/ (checked 2026-11-27)

UHIP's coverage-details page says a $500 late application fee applies if dependants are not enrolled within 30 days of the date they are eligible. UHIP also says there is no discount for the time they had no coverage, and the premium is payable from the arrival date, the first day of the month the student's term started, or the employment start date, as listed on that page. UHIP says to renew family coverage at least 30 days before it expires. https://uhip.ca/uhip-services/coverage-details/ (checked 2026-11-27)
